

I urge the FCC not to relax the broadcast ownership rules that protect US citizens from media monopolies.

These proposed changes would allow giant media conglomerates to gain near-total control of radio and television news and information in communities across our nation. These conglomerates would then have the ability to keep opposing viewpoints off the air.

US citizens deserve to hear more than one point of view on important issues. Therefore, I urge the FCC to continue the broadcast ownership protections that help ensure all points of view are heard.
